COSTA CONCORDIA

- The Costa Concordia sets sail on January 13, 2012 for a seven-day cruise under the command of Captain Schettino

COSTA CONCORDIA

- At 9:45 pm local time, the Costa Concordia collides with a reef off the shore of the island Giglio, Italy
- At 10:44 pm, the ship comes to a final rest at a 70° angle partially capsized and sinking in 20 meters of water

Costa Concordia Hits Reef

COSTA CONCORDIA

- At 10:48 the order was given to evacuate the ship
- The evacuation took over six hours and still all passengers were not evacuated

COSTA CONCORDIA

- In the end 32 people died as a result of negligence

COSTA CONCORDIA

- Captain Schettino later testified that he steered too close to the shore to “impress the passengers”
- Instead, he struck a reef, tearing a 160-foot gash in the port hull

COSTA CONCORDIA

- Captain Schettino was found guilty of manslaughter, causing a shipwreck and abandoning the ship off the western coast before all the passengers had been evacuated safely
